List of UNESCO heritage sites in Nepal.

There are 10 UNESCO heritage sites in Nepal. Seven are located within Kathmandu Valley, while the other 3 are spread across the Country. Based on their significance, these heritages are classified into natural and historical heritages.

Pashupatinath

Dedicated to the prominent Hindu deity, Lord Shiva, Pashupatinath is sacred to Hindus. The literal translation of Pashupatinath is Lord of animals. This shrine is believed to have been built around 400 A.D. Styled in alluring pagoda style, and there are over 500 temples scattered along the area. The temple is built on the Bagmati River's bank, one of the tributaries of the holy River of Hindus.

Swayambhunath

The name Swayambhunath translates to "self-existent," and this unique Buddhist monument is believed to have emerged by itself. The present-day memorial dates back to 460 A.D. This monument is situated at the western end of Kathmandu Valley and rises above 100 meters from the surface level of Kathmandu Valley.

A mythological statement advocates that Swayabhunath was born out of a lotus flower that emerged in the middle of Kathmandu Lake. It has since been a revered site for Buddhist pilgrims. Swayambhunath stupa is a masterpiece of architecture. It is based on a dome followed by a cube structure, which is pointy at the top. The cube is painted in all directions, signifying the eyes of Buddha, and the whole structure is decorated with Buddhist prayer flags.

Boudhanath

Boudhanath is a significant Buddhist shrine and Nepal's most prominent monument. Located in the northeastern end of Kathmandu Valley, it is a revered site for Buddhist pilgrims. The centerpiece of Boudhanath is a pyramid-shaped stupa built on top of a dome.

This stupa is encircled by a circular path called "Kora," meaning walking in circles. The outer vicinity of the stupa is filled with spinning prayer wheels, which you will find in most Buddhist sites. As a revered site and touristic destination, Boudhanath is famed for its religious significance and artistic marvels.

Kathmandu Durbar Square

Durbar Square refers to the palaces, temples, courtyards, and shrines complex. Kathmandu Durbar Square is a historical monument that portrays the art and craft of the Malla regimes built between the 12th and 18th century A.D. These palaces were royal residences during the Malla regime and are a living museum today.

Mallas are considered higher caste Newars, and the palace's detailing of art and architecture depicts typical Newari artworks. The most prominent shrines here are Hanuman Dhoka Palace, Kumari Chok, Taleju Temple, Basantapur Tower, and Kal Bhairav Temple.

Patan Durbar Square

Patan is the royal residence of the ancient Lalitpur kingdom. Patan Durbar Square is a complex of royal palaces, Hindu shrines, architectural buildings, and artifacts dating centuries ago. Like Kathmandu Durbar Square, this area has been preserved as a historical landmark site with its astounding artistic amusement. It is situated to the south of Kathmandu across the Bagmati River.

The Durbar Square consists of centuries-old monuments, including the Krishna Temple, Patan Museum, Mul Chok, Golden Temple, Mahaboudhha Temple, and Kwa Bahal. As a UNESCO heritage site, the ambiance in and around the Durbar Square takes you back to the times of ancient Malla kings.

Bhaktapur Durbar Square

Nestled about 15 kilometers to the west is another Newari kingdom, Bhaktapur. Locally called “Bhadgaon,” this historic city is rich in culture, tradition, and history. Similar to Kathmandu Durbar Square and Patan Durbar Square, there are a series of temples, palaces, and monuments that date back to the time of Malla kings between the 12th and 18th centuries.

Bhaktapur’s once administrative hub and royal residence is now a keynote attraction for travelers. 55 Window Palace, Vatsala Temple, Nyatapola Temple, Bhairav Nath Temple, and Singha Durbar are among the notable monuments of Bhaktapur Durbar Square.

Changunarayan

Changunarayan is one of the oldest Hindu shrines in Kathmandu Valley devoted to the Hindu deity, Lord Vishnu. It dates back to the 4th century by the Licchavhi dynasty kings. This temple’s architecture is unlike what you would find elsewhere in Kathmandu. It blends in the artistic amusement of the Licchavi and Malla dynasties, giving it an authentic shape. The main temple’s doors, windows, pillars, roofs, and struts portray impressive architectural figures.

Lumbini

Lumbini has been a significant monument across the globe for its revered history. This site has been a sacred site for Buddhists for long. This area is considered the birthplace of Lord Buddha and is filled with architectural structures built all over. Similarly, You may travel to Lumlini from Pokhara and Kathmandu.

The core location of Lumbini is marked by Mayadevi temple, which is believed to be the birthplace of Siddhartha Gautam Buddha. Various Buddhist monuments are scattered throughout the area, and the leading site of Lumbini is filled with ponds and water bodies.

Sagarmatha National Park

Sagarmatha National Park encapsulates the floral and geographical diversity of the Solukhumbu district in eastern Nepal. Home to some of the rarest species and towering mountains, this national park is filled with natural gems not found elsewhere.

With Mt. Everest (8848.86m) sitting tall at the edge, this national park is the tallest mountain in the world. There are over 300 mountains located within Sagarmatha National Park, and it is the richest of all in terms of biodiversity. Himalayan tahrs, Snow Leopard, Himalayan Musk deer, red pandas, and Himalayan monal are amongst the rare species of animals found here. This national park was established in 1976 A.D. and was listed as UNESCO in 1979.

Chitwan National Park

The southwestern vicinity of Nepal is filled with dense tropical and subtropical forests. This area was established as a national park in 1973, the first national park in Nepal. The dense forest encapsulates the area with numerous rare flora and fauna.

This area is famed for the Royal Bengal Tiger, horned Rhino, Asian Elephant, Gharial, Deer, and other animals. The rarity of this national park makes it popular for activities like Jungle Safaris, Nature walks, Bird Watching, and elephant-related activities.

Annapurna range.

The Annapurna Range is the west drive from Kathmandu. You may also travel by plane. The Annapurna Conservation Area covers the Annapurna range, which is 800 meters to 5416 meters, including high passes called the Throung-La pass.
